The Bank of English is a large collection of samples of written and spoken English stored by computer for the study of the language in use. This database of the English now numbers over 200 million words - 10 times the size of the 1987 database - and it continues to grow and to increase its scope and depth. This huge collection is composed of a wide range of different types of writing and speech. It contains samples of the English language from hundreds of different sources.

Written texts come from newspapers, magazines, fiction and nonfiction books, reports, letters, and other documents. About 7 percent of the collection is made up from transcriptions of everyday casual conversations, radio broadcasts, meetings, and so on. The material is up-to-date, with the majority of texts originating after 1990.

Morality concerns itself with good and bad, right and wrong, and moral duty. But are there universal moral values? Moral relativists may deny the existence of universal values. One instance that can help illustrate moral relativism is the Nuremberg trials of 1946, in which several top Nazi officials were tried for "crimes committed against humanity." These Nazi officials did not plead guilty. Their defense was that they were simply following orders and acting to the laws executed by the State. Do you believe that universal moral values do not exist, that each country or group of people has separate rights and wrongs associated with their culture, and that you are unable to judge them using your own culture. On the other hand, if you feel that the Allied Powers were correct in putting these officers on trial, then you believe that there are basic moral values that should be obeyed. That is, you believe in a Universal Justice, or Cicero's National Law Doctrine.

36. Who would probably be most interested in this passage?
- (A) Philosophers.
  - (B) Historians.
  - (C) Psychologists.
  - (D) Engineers.
37. According to the passage, what does morality involve?
- (A) The belief in universal values.
  - (B) The belief of relativists.
  - (C) Crimes against humanity.
  - (D) Standards of behavior.
38. What is the meaning of "relativist" in this passage?
- (A) A physicist who specializes in Einstein's Theory of Relativity.
  - (B) Someone who believes that conceptions of truth and moral values are not absolute.
  - (C) Someone who obeys universal moral values.
  - (D) A theologian who believes in and puts emphasis on original sin.
39. According to the passage, which of the following is true?
- (A) Not everyone believes in Cicero's National Law Doctrine.

- (B) Relativists approve of the crimes committed by the Nazi officers.
  - (C) Universal laws originate from the Allied Powers.
  - (D) The actions of the Nazi officers were excused.
40. If you believe in National Law Doctrine, then which of the following statements would you accept?
- (A) The Nazi officials tried in Nuremberg were innocent.
  - (B) Moral relativists question morality.
  - (C) Only the natural laws of the universe are true.
  - (D) There are basic moral values that should be obeyed.
