For many people, the world-famous festival “Oktoberfest” is almost the synonym of beer. But do you know the origin of “Oktoberfest?” Munich's first “Oktoberfest” dates back to 1810 and it was originally held to celebrate a royal wedding. At that time, horse races and luscious food were served as the major ways to celebrate. However, the culinary delights, namely beer, were much more popular than the wedding ceremony itself and other activities at the wedding. Ever since then, beer has become an indispensable element of the festival and the Munich beer festival has been ___26___ nearly once a year. Since a Bavarian autumn can be fairly unpredictable, though it is called Oktoberfest, the festival, ___27___ takes place in September. In Germany, autumn is chilly and sometimes even comes with early snow.

To the present, Oktoberfest is attracting a ___28___ of visitors and it's undoubtedly the world-largest festival around the world. Big beer tents, as you may have imagined when you hear the word Oktoberfest, are there to accommodate the visitors from all over the world. Opening ceremony normally begins at noon. All the guests, staff and members of the brass bands are also fully prepared and well-dressed in traditional costumes. The highlight of the event would be that, at the end of the parade, the mayor taps the first keg of beer and then shouts: “o'zapft is !” In Bavarian, this means “it is tapped.” To survive the 16-day nonstop party, of course you need to have a ___29___ stomach.

Indeed, the festival itself is a huge success. When one thinks of “beer”, Munich is the name of city easily associated with. Munich is recognized as the number one beer metropolis throughout the world. Oktoberfest, the world-famous festival, is for sure a great and successful push for it. Nowadays, it's not only a festival of Munich's beer but also the Bavarian capital's 30. The festival now has been exported worldwide and has become the household name in the world.
